Not illustrated. 1921 Excerpt: .I followed the sound of their voices till I found them. They were about twenty in all, men, women, and children, and their leader, as I noticed with surprise and pleasure, was in the uniform of a French poilu. The hymn they were singing was heroic in its sentiment, and the little congregation was singing it with fervor. Then followed a prayer, and the soldier-leader spoke it so simply and slowly that I could follow it all. Nothing, I think, has made me feel more deeply the suffering and devotion of France in this terrible War, than that prayer did in this little Church of the Open Book. Getting Ready For The Crowd February 5. I am taking a few moments while waiting for Dr. Francon, one of our best friends and greatest helpers here, who is devoting the greater part of his time to our interests. He speaks English fluently, and understands Americans, having known many of them personally and professionally. I am waiting at his house till he comes in, to ask him to go with me on an errand in which I need, not only his facility in French, but also his persuasive powers. Things are moving rapidly here now, or at least a great deal of work is going on; for the time of opening is now near, and there is a tremendous amount to be done. You see, active preparations in detail could not be started, till the necessary technical and...
