Lsger Lines, short lines placed above or below the staff. On these lines and in their spaces the additional notes are placed. Ex. 58.--Leger Lines above. 3 Below. Leggiero (Ital.), in a light manner. Lentando, going slower. Lento, a slow movement. Lesson, a musical composition, calculated to improve the performer. Clementi s octave lesson is a masterpiece. Handel s lessons for the harpsichord are excellent. License, a deviation from the strict rules of harmony. The rules of harmony having changed as the art became more perfect, what was a license formerly is now allowed. The tritone was formerly a forbidden interval; now it is used with effect. The introduction of a triplet is a license. See Triplet. Ligature, a word synonymous with tie, bind, or syncopation. See these words. Lines, the name given to the five parallel lines which form the staff; the heads of the notes are placed on them, or in their spaces. Loco, at the usual place, after having played a passage an octave higher than written. Long, a note used in ancient music; it is equal in point of duration to two breves, or four semibreves, and shaped thus rr. Loure (French), the name of an old dance, generally in I; its movement was slow. Lusingando (Ital.), in a playful style. Lute, a stringed instrument, formerly much in fashion; it...
